INTRODUCTION

In 1960 the Arizona Pioneers' Historical Society, dedicated since 1884 to the collection and preservation of historical data and artifacts of Arizona, broadened its program with the issue of Arizoniana, a quarterly journal. Index to Arizoniana: the Journal of Arizona History, 1960-1964 is a guide to the information in the first five volumes of that journal.

Intended originally as a newsletter with short feature articles and society news, the slim pamphlet grew in one year to a respectable historical journal of thirty-four pages an issue. To compliment the standard articles and biographical sketches, the editors began reviewing books on Arizona history in 1962 and issued four installments of bibliography on Arizona in 1963. By the end of the fifth year, each issue of Arizoniana averaged seventy pages. The journal, containing articles by lay historians as well as by professionals, retained the enthusiasm of a youthful publication while subjecting itself to the discipline demanded by scholars.

None of the first five volumes included an index thus making more pressing the publication of a cumulative index. Compiled along the guidelines established in Martha Thorne Wheeler's New York State Library Indexing: Principles, Rules and Examples and the University of Chicago Manual of Style, this index, it is hoped, will further interest and research in Arizona history by making easily available the material in Arizoniana.

The index includes all authors, titles, and subjects as well as photographs, maps, charts, and obituaries. It omits names in membership lists, notices of deaths, and society news. Under the general heading of Arizona Pioneers' Historical Society, however, references are made to pages where this type of information is found in each quarterly. Footnotes are not indexed unless they contain pertinent information about a subject or book.

Since the pages of the quarterly issues of Arizoniana are not numbered consecutively, each volume has four sets of identical page numbers. Each index entry, therefore, includes not only the volume and page but also the number of the issue. A typical entry reads as follows: Picacho Mine, IV(1), 35. Information on Picacho Mine is in volume four, number one, page thirty-five.

A number of individuals have helped with the production of this index, and deserving special thanks for their major contributions to the preliminary work are Mrs. Robert O. Meitz and Mrs. Donald E. Phillips.
